

The City of London Corporation, in association with the Italian Embassy in London and MacroGeo will host the seminar:

“The Future of Europe after Brexit and Trump”

Thursday 26 January 2017, 17.30-19.00 (arrivals from 17.00)

Old Library, Guildhall, London EC2V 7HH

(entry via 71 Basinghall Street)

Recent events have shown how geopolitics can affect economic developments and could have serious repercussions for financial markets.

On the occasion of the launch of the new independent advisory company MacroGeo, co-founded by Carlo De Benedetti, and in partnership with the Italian Embassy in London, a panel will discuss the future of the European integration process, as an example of the interconnectedness between geopolitics and macrofinance.

Speakers will include:

Mark Boleat - Chairman of the Policy and Resources Committee at the City of London Corporation

Nouriel Roubini - Professor of Economics at Stern School of Business, New York University

Lucio Caracciolo - Head of Geopolitics at MacroGeo

Francine Lacqua - Anchor at Bloomberg (moderator)

Mario Monti - former EU Competition Commissioner and Italian Prime Minister (in videoconference from Brussels)

Brunello Rosa - CEO and Chief Economist at MacroGeo

Pasquale Q. Terracciano - Ambassador of Italy to the UK

The event is by invitation only.

If you wish to attend, please send an email to info@macrogeo.global